PRICE OF COPPER SHAVED BY TRUST

Producers Have Been Getting Half a Cent Too Little in the Past.

BOSTON CON.'S ADVANCE

CONTROL THOUGHT GOING WAY OF UTAH COPPER.

A great deal of kicking has been indulged in by eastern copper metal market men over the manner in which ing & Mining Journal and their application in making settlements with producers by the American Smelting & Refining company. One of the kickers quoted by the Boston News Bureau as follows:

"The agitation against the acceptance of the Engineering & Mining Journal settling prices for copper has done a great public good, for there can question that the copper companies which have been receiving the for their copper have not received within ½c per pound of the actual market price of the metal, or the price the selling agencies who settled with the companies on this schedule received from the consumer.

"For a series of years the Engineering & Mining Journal figures compared favorably with the actual sales of copper by the leading copper producers, but within a year there appears to have been a change in the attitude of that journal on the question of prices, to the great disadvantion of prices, to the great disadvantic from them none of which are one and the great disadvantic from them none of which are one and the great disadvantic from them none of which are one and the great disadvantic from them none of which are one and the great disadvantic from them none of which are one and the great disadvantic from them none of which are one and the great disadvantic from them are there is develop the wiser plan to develop the ore that actually exists.

In one instance, a mine having a large surface outcrop has been opened by tunnel disadvantic from them are there is develop the wiser plan to develop the ore that actually exists. tion of prices, to the great disadvantage of the producer. As probably 200,000,000 and 300,000,000 pounds are settled for on the basis of these prices, the difference of 1/2c per pound takes from $1,000,000 to $1,500,000 per annum out of the pockets of the producer, and places it in the pockets of the American Smelting & Refining it can be proved that the copper people are financially interested in this trade publication, and have been respensible for the prices published upon which many of the companies have been obliged to settle for their product at a half cent under the market, I have good legal advice that the contracts with the selling agencies can be

DENVER MONEY IN LA SALS.

Big Tunnel Enterprise to Be Pushed as Result of Merger.

Denver and Colorado mining talent is again in evidence here in the La Sal again in evidence here in the last said country by two recent promotions in this immediate vicinity, one of which has been under consideration for a long time, but delayed on account of unreasonable prices in prospects to complete the merical process. The lines and the advance has been not merely a market revenuent. I er of a group of claims on Mineral moun-ain, of which the famous High Ore property has been the caption, says a Basin correspondent of a Denver paper.

Your correspondent is authentically informed that C. H. Bryan, a well known mining man of Denver, is to be here on or before the new year to prepare for the relocation of a number of neglected properties that are quite essential to the erties that are quite essential to the working territory of this merger, and the right of way to the Mineral Mountain-High Ore tunnel project. It is admissible to say now that such plans can be consummated without interference, and those here now are fairly agreeable to the move. For over two years this enterprise has been pending through the instrumentality of certain members of the Baalbee Mining company of Denver, but unreassonable property owners and contending influences have been in the way. This prometes now to be cleared up by the proper parties acquiring such interests as are desired by relocation, and then they can proceed to business as long ago planned. Last fall this camp was visited by Colonel Thomas B. Crawford of Denver, and Messrs. Bell and Burton, two eastern Messrs. Bell and Eurton, two eastern moneyed men connected with the proposition, and they were highly pleased with the outlook of the camp. Will Eastman, owning considerable property within the range of this tunnel enterprise, a rived in camp yesterday, presumably at the instance of Colonel Crawford, which leads one of an observing eye to believe that he is the forerunner of preliminary preparations for active operations so far as arations for active operations so far as the company can proceed at this time of the year.

It was announced over a year ago that if this syndicate could acquire the necessary concessions of ground it was prepared to expend $50,000 in development work and improvements, and as they now have full swing, it may be said that such operations will be started as soon as practicable in the spring. Such properties as will fall into their possession are large copper and gold producers, and now that copper and gold producers, and now that copper is advancing to such favorable figures there is every prospect that this enterprise has discovered a pretty good thing. They are certainly up to a date now where no outsiders can use the native "hammer" with any injury to the presenties.

Frank L. Moone of Denver, who is now in the east, has succeeded in interesting a strong syndicate in this locality, and they, too, will come in for possession of a valuable property here on Horse mountain, well known as the old Grand Mountain, well known as the old Grand View group. While considerable development work has already been done, it is proposed to continue on with the proposed tunnel started by the former company, and tap the several big hematite copper veins at a great depth below where good showings have been made by limited surface work. Such arrangements have been face work. Such arrangements have been made whereby the Moone syndicate comes in full possession of the property on New Year's, and immediate preparations are to be made for active operations, being ocated where snow and winter influences are of no consequence.

There are a number of other mining propositions yet in an embryo state which are being promoted by Colorado talent, and to all appearance are not "hot air" ventilations, such as have characterized the "revelation" booms of this part of Utah in past years. When Colorado money begins to jingle around at the instigation of Colorado enterprise, then something is going to happen when the something is going to happen when the practicable time comes.

BOOSTS UTAH MINING.

Denver Mining Reporter Has Nice Things to Say of This Region.

Last week's output from the Tintic camp, Utah, was by far the largest that the mining interests can so readily respond to the demands made upon

We have here an excellent example of the beneficial effects of co-operation, as well as the interdependency of the mining and smelting industries. Large accumulations of capital here prove their value and find their justi-fication in the erection of reduction plants that are far outside the scope of private enterprise; but their de-pendency on the co-operation of a multitude of shippers and producers is no less exemplified.

The increase of shipments from the Tintle district is probably only an index of what we may legitimately look for in Utah for some time to come. It requires no prophetic powers to fore-tell that Salt Lake county will, within FITTING HOLIDAY CLIMAX few years, be the center of mining and smelting activity such as will only be fully realized when it is an accom-

One of the legitimate outlets for the tonnage of Nevada's camps, Salt Lake should, with the assistance of the numerous railroads that are being planned and built, be the destination of ore shipments, the value of which will be far in excess of those now received. Add to this the increase which market men over the manner in which quotations are made by the Engineer-Mercur, Deep Creek and La'Sal, and some idea may be gathered of the fuimportance and magnitude Utah's mineral industry.

STAY WITH THE VEIN.

In Making Mines It Is Better Than Doing Dead Work.

In the development of mines a great deal of work is often done without regard to geological conditions, to system or to Engineering & Mining Journal figures anything else in particular—haphazard tunnels, crosscuts, shafts and other extension of the actual cavations, says the Mining and Scientific Where this erratic "method" mine development is pursued, as a usual thing there is little development on the veln, if there is a vein. In this way large amounts of money are expended and practically wasted, for, while it may be worth something to know where there is from them, none of which are on ore, and with no sign of ore.

At another place a tunnel has been driven through hard rock more than 1,000 feet and then stopped short of the vein which it was started to cut and explore. The machinery at the mouth of the tun-nel has been removed, and unless the tunnel is driven to completion, this work also is wasted, costing many thousands of the American Smelting & Renning company and the metal selling agencies.

"This is a serious matter, and naturally raises resentment on the part of the producing companies. Now if the producing companies. Now if the producing companies in the manner that work has been done. That the mine is idle is not strange. hat the mine is idle is not strange. In the development of a new property it is always good mining to "stay with the vein" and to do deadwork cross-cutting and exploring the unknown region on either side of the vein later, when the vein system is better understood.

MARVELOUS COMSTOCK LODE.

Between 1870 and 1880 Payrolls Aggregated $750,000 a Month.

A writer on the Virginia Chronicle says that from 1870 to 1880, 6,000 men were employed on the Comstock in the forty or more mines along the lode, from the Utah on the north to the Kossuth Dayton on the south, over five miles in length. The payrolls during the years mentioned uppayrolls during the years mentioned aggregated $750,000 and 2,000 stamps were in onstant operation crushing ore from the

One million feet of lumber for timbering in the mines and 100 cords of wood were conthe mines and 100 cords of wood were consumed every twenty-four hours, the Consolidated Virginia alone requiring 500,000 feet of timber monthly, and the monthly bullion output from the mine and the Colifornia frequently exceeded $3,000,000.

The Comstock is still producing over $2,000,000 annually and the work now in progress of recovering the flooded levels and sinking to a depth of 5,000 feet will, in the opinion of experts, result in the discovery of much larger and more valuable ore bodies than have yet been found, as the lode shows a greater width on the 2,200 level than on those above.

BUTTERS TO TREAT THE ORE.

Tonopah Producers to Find a Market at Virginia City.

Satisfactory arrangements have been concluded with Manager Crosby to treat ore from the Tonopah Mining company at the Butters plant. The ore will be crushed at the Best & Belcher mill and the pulp flumed to the plant in Six Mile canyon for final treatment, says the Virginia City Chronicle.

Virginia City Chronicle.

The mill has a daily crushing capacity of 100 tons and daily shipments of that amount will be delivered at the mill after Jan. 1 and continue throughout the entire year. The Chronicle made mention three months ago that negotiations were in progress for treating Tonopah ores at the Butters plant and the forecast has been verified. The daily shipments of Tonopah ores may be increased to 200 tons before the closes of the current year, when increased crushing capacity is available. The first shipment of ore is now in transit.

camp, Utah, was by far the largest that has been made for a number of years. This is ascribed in part to the very favorable conditions existing in the metal market, particularly the lead and silver markets, and further to the increasing activity which is now manifest thoughout the state, says the Denver Mining Reporter.

That the smelter construction now in progress in Utah is acting as a stimulus to mining is not to be doubted, and on the other hand it should be gratifying to both the smelting companies and the people of the state.

Business Records Have Been Smashed in All Material Lines.

LOCAL STOCKS CLOSE STRONG, BUT INACTIVE.

Business in Salt Lake City is at high water mark as the old year passes into history. Right from the start the year was a good one. Prices for all farm products ruled high, and there was plenty off stuff for sale. Without ceasing the mines on all sides have continued to pour a stream of gold, silver, copper and lead into the community. Railroads are headed in the direction of Salt Lake from different points of the compass. Smelters and other institutions are going up like magic. Building has been on the boom. There have been two jobs looking for every man in sight and as a result wages have ruled high. Workers are prosperous.

All this has meant a tremendous increase in business in all lines. This was emphasized in the week just closed, the best holiday week by all odds ever experienced by the citizens of this community. More goods, better goods, and at higher prices have passed over the counters and into the homes of the people than in any corresponding week since the city was founded. Merchants in all lines are ecceptettettettettettette hugging themselves over the records made and over the outlook for the year just opening.

Much Public Work Done.

Mayor Morris and his administration are going out with the consciousness that they have done more in the way of public works, more in the way of driving Salt Lake City in the direction of its ultimate destiny than any other administration in the history of the community. This progress is reflected in the increased business in all lines, in good part the result of the work done and the money expended by the municipality.

There is a feeling of absolute confidence in the breast of every resident of this city as the new year opens. There will be a rush of building in 1906. There will be more real estate business than in any of the last ten years. Public improvements will be pushed without a break. New railroads will come to the city and industries will
